

John Stewart
Chief Executive Officer / Cofounder
Fastbreak AI

John Stewart is an entrepreneur who began his career in 2003 when he founded an engineering services firm. After exiting that field in 2009, Stewart co-founded Saber Business Solutions, which eventually evolved into MapAnything, a scheduling software and geospatial mapping company that was bought by Salesforce in 2019. John has co-founded multiple SaaS startups, advises CEOs on the correct routes for business development and strategy, and serves on several boards.

Stewart has a B.S. in Mechanical Engineering from Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Together with the help of Dr. Chris Groer and Dr. Tim Carnes, Fastbreak AI was born in July 2022. Fastbreak AI aims to develop the most advanced sports scheduling engine and within months, the company gained venture funding and signed with the NBA. When Fastbreak AI acquired Optimal Planning Solutions in 2024, one of the few scheduling services in professional sports, Fastbreak became the leading entity in professional sports scheduling, working with the NFL, NHL, MLB, MiLB, and MLS.
